She loved wildlife and rescued many, including an owl, seagull, and hawk. Wildlife would appear wherever she was and take up residence in her yard: an opossum, mother duck with ducklings, raccoons, deer. all were welcome. Jeanne loved animals, especially dogs. hers were spoiled rotten! She loved people from all walks of life and would give them the shirt off her back if needed. Jeanne loved learning whether through reading current events or medical journals or attending OSHER Institute lectures. She always surprised folks with her voracious appetite for knowledge, as she would read several novels at the same time and have a stack of National Geographic and medical journals by her chair. Many times, finishing a novel in one day. She loved cooking, fishing, camping, and culture. The Art Institute of Chicago, Chicago Symphony, and Shakespeare festival were her favorites. Jeanne loved music, be it Tchaikovsky, Yoyo Ma, Yanni, Nakai, Peter Paul & Mary, or Heart and Led Zeppelin. She would whistle while grocery shopping.

Jeanne loved Nursing- always caring for her patients as if they were her family. Jeanne loved her daughter more than anything. She pulled her on a sled to kindergarten, made puppets for her classroom, and played baseball with all the neighborhood kids. Jeanne and Brie had a very special bond and enjoyed many Adventures (kayaking was her favorite). Jeanne's smile and sparkling eyes lit up a room so much positive energy and zest for life. “ Dear Brie I was sorry to have missed the celebration of your mothers life. I know she is in a peaceful place but it is also a transition for you now. I still miss my mother and probably always will. The hard part is wanting to share an event or person that only she would have been interested in. But, as you know, time has a way of healing. My heart is with you, dear friend, and your family. Fondly, Joan Springer-Wellman Thank you very much Joan. Yes it is an interesting transition for me as well. Many Blessings to you this Holiday. Take care of yourself. Your friend, Brie
